

David C. Hall is one of the most ordinary people you will ever meet. Just ask his kids. One of his favorite sayings is, “It is better to remain silent and thought a fool than to speak and remove all doubt.” Even so, he is delighted to be back as a speaker at the Summer Symposium.

David is an experienced fundraising executive who spent most of his career as a chief development officer. Several years ago, he began to specialize in planned giving, and since then has directed regional and national planned giving programs for large national charities.

David is a popular speaker who has addressed national and regional conference presenting on topics such as donor relations, stewardship and marketing for planned giving.

David has an adoring wife, respectful children and grandchildren who think he is fun. He also has an obnoxious cat. David just got back from a canoe trip so ask him about it.
